Announcing a new series . . .

on Twentieth-Century American Culture

Series editors

Karal Ann Marling

Erika Doss

The twentieth century, said publisher Henry Luce in 1941, is "the first great American century."

This multidisciplinary series seeks to examine the past hundred years of American culture in its broadest configurations. The series will explore all forms of cultural expression and production, from Barbie dolls, Cheeseheads, and monster truck rallies to the NAMES quilt, the themed restaurant, and the design of Valentines.
