ANNOUNCING A NEW SERIES

RED OAK BOOKS:

READINGS IN AMERICAN CULTURE

Series Editors: Michael Barton, Professor, American Studies Program, Pennsylvania State University, Harrisburg, and Nancy A. Walker, Professor of English and Director of Women's Studies, Vanderbilt University

This unique series consists of single volumes of seminal essays on fields central to the study of American culture. Each volume starts with an overview of the topic, written by a noted scholar in the field, and includes a selection of articles, original sources, and case studies. By bringing together many of the important commentaries on American culture in areas such as humor, religion, literature, and art, RED OAK BOOKS provide a convenient package of material formerly available only in library reserve rooms and class-packs. The following subjects have been signed thus far: American Humor; American Landscape and Environmental Studies; A Life History Approach to the Study of American Identity; Culture and Politics in Post-1945 America.
